- Speaker 1: 00:00 Um, I'm here with Anita and Rae Ann at the Kansas City March. My name is Adam Paxon. Um, and I just wanted to ask you guys, why are you marching today?
- Speaker 2: 00:10 So, so that our voices will be heard. In support of the future of democracy. Great. And how did you hear about the march? Social media. Social Media? Yeah. And, um, what do you hope, what do you hope
- Speaker 1: 00:25 comes out of today? Do you think, um, this can accomplish something and what do you hope it will accomplish? I think it will, I'm hoping that it will bring people on, you know, get people on their feet and get them out and get them vocal so that we can preserve some of the rights I feel like we deserve.
- Speaker 2: 00:46 Ma'am. People need to come together and they cannot become complacent of what can happen within the next four years. This is a call for action for everyone to keep marching. Yeah.
- Speaker 1: 00:59 And have you guys been politically active in the past and this, uh, this is a lot of people's first, um, you know, really motivation to come out. I have not been that politically active. I always vote, but I've never really gone to marches.No.
- Speaker 2: 01:14 Well, we haven't been to marches since the late sixties but this is part of our lives and we have come because we are called to action now for something that is the most important thing perhaps in our century. Yeah.
- Speaker 1: 01:26 And do you think, are there things coming up that you, um, do you continue to, well do you plan to continue to do more after today? Are there things on the horizon that you?
- Speaker 2: 01:36 Definitely, this is a call for everyone that cares about our democracy to become more active and to not be complacent. Yes.
- Speaker 1: 01:45 She sees us having to do this more often for the next four years or longer. I mean, this, this, yeah, this is, this is just the beginning. Okay. Yeah. Thank you guys so much.
